

Mel and Carly on allyship

Transcript

00:00:00- 00:00:08

Carly:

We're all human and allyship is supporting every person for who they are.

00:00:09- 00:00:20

Mel:

Lifting each other up like, empowering each other, like getting the best out of each other because it makes you better and it makes the world better and it makes the community better and it makes the situation better.

00:00:21- 00:00:31

Carly:

Going back to our announcement I mean the LPGA sharing that news and literally every LPGA player I can think of commenting on it like that's allyship.

00:00:32- 00:01:15

Mel:

In the past I've had sponsors that have kind of made me hide who I am. I've had a, you know, basically a contract ripped up in front of me. And now, you know, looking back well it's been six seven years, I mean, the change has been incredible. Like the sponsors I have now and the companies that I'm proud to represent, they completely align with my beliefs and want to make a change as well. I don't need to hide any part of myself with Grant Thornton.

Oh, these look awesome. This is what I want to use my platform for. And this is what Grant Thornton wants to use their platform for is to make a difference. And these things do make a difference.

I am your ally, like we are your ally at Grant Thornton and we are here to represent you and represent the community. And it's something that we're extremely proud of and something that's extremely important.
